Senator Judd Gregg Reacts to Senate Democrats' Budget Proposal

“Over the past five years, the economy has grown and prospered thanks to pro-growth tax policies that have generated more than seven million new jobs and record levels of federal revenues. However, the looming threat of unfunded liabilities continues to pose our greatest fiscal challenge.

“Therefore, I am disappointed that the majority party has presented a budget that contains significant new spending, significant new taxes, significant new debt, and absolutely no attempt to address the long-term problems we face.

“I look forward to working with the majority to make some much-needed adjustments to their proposal. We must work together to keep fair tax policies in place, continue to grow the economy, reduce spending and debt, and leave to our children a government they can afford.”
